Women and Children Put to Sword, Greek Troops Drowned And Decapitated by Turks

Succeeding Dispatches From Smyrna Only Increase Tale of Horror.

REFUGEES END OWN LIVES

Thousands Crowded Onto Wharves to Escape Flames and Pursuing Turkish Nationalists; Estimates of Dead Rank High as 120,000 Dispatches Say

By Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Succeeding dispatches from Constantinople, Athens and other centers of information of the Near East only tend to magnify the tale of the tragedy in Smyrna

The greater part of the city is in ruins, laid waste by a conflagration of incendiary origin and the flames, according to the latest accounts, had reached the water front where the quays were crowded with fear-crazed Christian refugees who fled from the Turks. Many have thrown themselves into the water rather than run the risk of being burned alive or facing Kemal Pasha's soldiers, drunk with victory and fired with religious fanaticism.

Others have not had the chance to choose, according to dispatches from Greek sources, which tell of horrible torture, mutilation, executions Large numbers of Greek soldiers have been decapitated and others forced into sacks and thrown into the sea. Allegations of having served in the Greek army bring death to the Armenians, and women and children are being put to the sword.

Estimates of the number killed vary greatly and the latest Athens dispatch quotes an American relief worker as declaring up to Thursday morning there had been 120,000 victims. It is thought this figure may have included the wounded, as previous reports placed the number of dead at 1,000 to 2,000.

LONDON, Sept. 16—The British government, addressing Roumania, Jugo-Slavia and Greece, is asking their participation in an effective defense of the neutral zone, it was learned officially today. Pedestrian Traffic Congestion on Bridge

Pedestrian traffic over the Youghiogheny river bridge is becoming almost as congested as that in the vehicle class. At present there is only walk across the structure, and at the point where the bridge crosses the Baltimore & Ohio tracks it has been narrowed down to about two feet.

When two streams of persons meet, going in opposite directions, the people cannot pass without touching each other. There was a virtual tie-up recently when a woman pushing a baby carriage used all the available space to get the little vehicle through. Traffic going in the opposite direction had to retreat or climb the railing to allow her to pass. Tomorrow will be the last day on which street cars may use the bridge for a week or 10 days. During that time the portion over the Baltimore & Ohio tracks will be rebuilt.

PRESIDENT HAS MADE UP MIND TO VETO BONUS BILL

Will Send Message to Congress Tuesday, Close Associates Say.

MAY OVERRULE VETO

By Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16 President Harding has definitely decided to veto the soldier bonus bill and will send his message to the House Tuesday, according to his close advisors who have talked with him recently

WASHINGTON, Sept 16—Congress Friday passed the soldier Bonus Bill along to President Harding.

Prompt action by the executive was anticipated but opinion at the capitol as to whether he would veto or approve the measure still divided. This question entered largely into the debate Friday which preceded Senate adoption of the conference report, 36 to 17

Conceding that while the question of the President's attitude was, as Senator Harrison, Democrat Mississippi, expressed it up in the air Senator McCumber Republican North Dakota, in charge of the bill said he "hoped to God" that the President would sign it

"I think he ought to sign it," he declared, adding that if senators who wanted to help the soldiers would remain in Washington until a final vote there would be sufficient votes to pass it over a veto

Some leaders in the House were of the opinion that if the President decided to veto the measure it would be returned to Congress early in the coming week. In that event, it was the plan to bring up speedily in the House the question of overriding the veto Proponents of the legislation were confident that the necessary two-thirds majority could be obtained the House having passed the bill by a majority of more than four to one

Admittedly however, there was doubt as to the situation in the Senate Opponents claimed 31 senators in opposition, two more than necessary to sustain the veto

During Senate debate Senator Underwood Alabama Democratic leader, referred to the probability of a veto, while Senator Harrison said he had reports that "word has been passed down the line that the President is going to veto the bill Senator McCumber told the Senate he still was in hopes that there would be no veto reiterating his opinion that the measure as drawn met the objection of the President and the Secretary of the Treasury to the original cash bonus plan.

APPOINTMENT OF COAL COMMISSION EXPECTED SOON

Speculation as to the Extent Hoover Will Influence Choice of Members.

BELIEVED TO HAVE LIST

Of Those Who Entertain the Same Ideas About Coal That the Secretary of Commerce Has; Fred W. Upham Has Names to Give President.

BY GEORGE H. CUSHING.
Special Correspondent of The Courier

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16—It now seems entirely likely—one never dares be too positive about such things—that Congress will authorize and the President will appoint a coal commission before the end of this month. As the time approaches for the actual selection of the men, much interest is being manifest in the personnel of the commission.

That is likely to be an interesting piece of news when it breaks, but a far more interesting question, at the minute, is "Who is going to appoint that commission?"

At first, the answer seems obvious. The law says that the President shall do the appointing. But, he never does that sort of thing. The President, very wisely, goes on the theory:

"What is the use of having a dog and doing the barking yourself?"

He will put his "O. K." on the appointments when they are made. In this particular case, he may even do some cross examining of the persons who make up the list and of the men who are represented. But, he will not comb the territory to find the right sort of men. Someone will have to do that work.

Of course it is understood that Mr. Hoover has his list already made out and submitted. The understanding is that Julius Barnes stands at the head of that list. Mr. Barnes is now president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and was, during the war, the president of the Grain Corporation which was one of Mr. Hoover's subsidiaries when he was running the food business. It is understood, also that John P. White, former president of the United Mine Workers of America is another member of the Hoover list There is just a hint, too, that Bernard M. Baruch, who was the war head of the War Industries Board may be included in the Hoover nominations.

Then, it is understood that Fred W. Upham, who has been in Washington of late, has quite a list of names which he wants to present. Mr. Upham is something by way of being treasurer and general money gatherer of the Republican party. He is also very much in the way of being a coal man. He is president of the Consumers Company of Chicago which is about the biggest thing of its kind in the world.

It is known that Mr. Upham was in Washington over a week-end in the latter part of June. It is known that immediately following his departure, the President put out the proposition that a coal commission should be appointed. It has always been declared that the President got his idea from Mr. Upham. And, it is also known that Mr. Hoover said, at the time, that he had nothing whatever to do with the proposal his advice not having been asked nor accepted.

With Mr. Hoover edging up on one side of the question and with Mr. Upham already close up on the other, it is beginning to be a question of some importance as to which of the two will name the commission.

It is rather interesting that all of the men who are said to be on the Hoover list entertain precisely the same ideas about coal that Mr. Hoover does. It is said, therefore, that the choice of the Hoover list would indicate that the commission would merely hand down Mr. Hoover's findings about coal—with such modifications as are necessary to make it apparent that the testimony was not wholly ignored.

On the other hand, it is said that if the Upham list shall be named—and there is not even a whisper as to the names which it contains—it will include the strongest and most independent men in the United States who will search the industry for pertinent facts and reveal them to the public without bias or preconceived notions.

These two programs are rather far apart It is going, therefore, to make a vast deal of difference whether one man or the other selects the list.

The one interesting question which is really in the background is:

"Will the commission investigate the industry only, or will it also investigate the union?"

Everybody is talking of this subject in whispers The fact is, everybody wants the union investigated but nobody is willing to speak out in meeting about it.

CHIEF CAPTURES BARROW AND KEG, OWNER GETS AWAY

Special to The Courier.

MOUNT PLEASANT, Sept 16.—Since the rounds of Chief of Police Robert Smith on Thursday night the borough has added to its holdings a wheelbarrow and a five gallon keg of moonshine.

As Chief Smith came out Hitchman street he heard a wheelbarrow that seemed to be carrying a heavy load and wondering what any man would be hauling at that hour he investigated. Seeing the keg on the wheelbarrow, the chief called to the man to stop, and as the fellow put on more speed the chief took up the chase.

After calling several times to the man to stop, he fired in the air. The man shrieked and dropped the wheelbarrow and keg and dashed off, making his escape.

Blacksmith Burned When Driving Shaft Of Truck Explodes

MOUNT PLEASANT, Sept. 16—On Thursday while George Smith, the veteran Main street blacksmith, was working at his shop, he was severely burned about the face, the right hand and chest. Mr. Smith was straightening a drive shaft on a truck.

There must have been oil in the shaft and when this was heated the oil ran into the forge and exploded, blowing all of the fire from the forge. Glasses saved his eyes. The clothes on his body caught fire and his cap was burned on his head. The shop also was set afire.

SYMPATHY OF TOWN IS EXTENDED TO SLAYER'S MOTHER

Many Visit Mrs. Anna Stell of Mount Pleasant to Cheer Her.

STANDS HIGH IN ESTEEM

MOUNT PLEASANT, Sept. 16.—The sympathy of the community has gone out to the aged Mrs. Anna Stell, mother of Fred Stell, who was found guilty at Greensburg of the murder of Miss Anna Yezek and who is now awaiting the pronouncement of the sentence of death.

Mrs. Stell, who is one of the best known Bohemian families of the town, is the mother of nine children. Two of her sons served in France. Albert gave up his life for his country and not when the word was received that he was killed in action did Mrs. Stell suffer the agony that she is suffering now waiting on the sentence to be pronounced on Fred.

Fred Stell served in France and was to his mother an ideal soldier. He had worked well before he left for France. His one weakness was drink.

Coming to town early in its coke history, Mrs. Stell has become well known, members of her family have become business people of the town and citizens, and many of the people are at this time expressing their sympathy to her as she sits at her Diamond street home waiting on the verdict that must come.

Not that the people of the community do not feel that Stell should be punished for the deed that he has committed, but it is the mother's bleeding heart that is being considered by the other mothers of the community who are calling and extending their sympathy.

Roads, Stories and People of Asia Minor

People and their daily life in Asia Minor, "that historic bridge-land between Asia and Europe, which again focuses world interest since the Turkish Army has taken Smyrna, are described in the following bulletin from the National Geographic Society.

"The modern history of Asia Minor began when the Seljuks invaded it only a few years after William the Conqueror set foot on English soil. A pronouncement of Mohammed saved the Greeks from either displacement or forcible conversion. The true believers paid no taxes. Hence the Greeks of Asia Minor were as much of an economic asset to the Turks as were the slaves to our own South and before the Civil War.

"The conflict of Greek and Turk of 1922 also has its roots in a practice which would be even more revolting to the 20th century than slavery—that is that 'tribute-children' were demanded of the subject race to fight in the army of Islam. By drafting children of Christians the famous janizaries were formed and these picked troops, under Mohammedan training, were mighty in battle and efficient in peace time as police.

"The contribution of Classic Greece to world culture is universally recognized; but the renascence of Greek cities and town during the 18th century is not so generally realized. Smyrna, now in the hands of the Turks, had a famous school with a great library, and the city itself was called a veritable hole of civilization and intellectual propaganda on the threshold of Asia. Avli, a seaport of the north frequently mention d in recent dispatches, has been called the 'Oriental Boston.' Here the passion for Hellas once induced the city council to enact a law compelling citizens to speak in Attic Greek, and imposing as a penalty recitation of Homeric lines for talking any other way.

"When Greece revolted in 821, and America was stirred by Daniel Webster's famous oration on the Greek cause, Asia Minor Greeks felt the fury of Turkish massacres. Avili was razed and Smyrna devastated but the Greeks survived. The sea coast area of Asia Minor which was assigned to Greek administration and which the Turks have now captured was carved from the old Turkish vilayets of Brusa and Aidin.

"In these two divisions the Greek population is estimated to have nearly doubled within the past 25 years, until now it approaches a million.

"One element in this expansion has been the Greek aptitude for trade in contrast to the Turks' unknown distaste for commerce. A striking aspect of many a town in western Asia Minor is the single shop, with merchandise as conglomerate as an old-time American village country store, and invariably this shop is kept by a Greek. Greek peasants settled in many fertile valleys, and all over the land they have erected schools. In Smyrna itself more than half the population is Greek and in lessening numbers the Greeks have penetrated the coastal plains, but the plateau which forms the interior of the peninsula is the stronghold of the Turk.

"Pause a moment and examine the stock of one of these stores—either the lone emporium of a village, or a lonesome shop set by the roadside to catch the passing crowd. Your up-to-the-minute American merchant who aspires to 'quick turn-over' has eliminated door-steps as one of those minor obstacles which may be just enough to divert a customer to an adjacent competitor. Your Greek merchant of Asia Minor has done away with the front of his store; his stock of goods constitutes his display. He also crosslegged at the entrance, smoking his inevitable cigaret. His merchandise comprises coffee, tubs of olives, tobacco, blankets, garlic, bread, sweetmeats, dried beef, salt, cheese and beer.

"One other absence, beside Turkish merchants, is conspicuous in Asia Minor—that is the women. Where Christian mingles with Moslem he must uphold the latter's policy of feminine seclusion. Upon entering a Greek home one may look upon the faces of its women-folk, but the casual traveler meets only men on the highways and encounters only men at the Khans, or inns, and should he observe a female form in the distance her face will be covered before he can distinguish her features. A men's club in Anatolia would have all the popularity of a riding and hunt club on a Texas cattle ranch.

"Travel is contested on many a Turkish road which seems extremely remote to western eyes. Accustomed as is the American to automobile-dotted highways he would marvel at the traffic jams of heavily laden camel caravans in the interior of Anatolia. Then there are the slow-moving bullock carts, carriers of enormous burdens.

"Even the Turk has a reason for his likes and dislikes; and his opposition to western innovations not always based on religious prejudices or sheer inertia. It was those bullock carts which aroused the opposition to macadam roads—an improvement which seemed to young American salesmen so obviously useful that the Turk would not oppose it.

"It soon was found that the rounded iron tires of our two bullock carts made a macadam road look like a corrugated iron. When such machine made bullock carts using the new roads equipped with wide, flat tires, which made necessary new wheels at considerable expense to the farmer, the country-side farmer rebelled and demanded the restoration of his stone roads with their magnified cobble stone surfaces, and once more was credited with 'pure cussedness' by the newspaper readers at occidental breakfast tables."

SATURDAY EVENING, SEP. 16, 1922.

THE "B. & O. FAMILY" AND ITS TASK.

While the details of the settlement between the striking shopmen and the officials of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad have not yet been made public, the mere fact that they have come to an agreement substantially upon the basis of President Willard's proposal occasions congratulations to both of the interested parties. The only regret is that so long a time was permitted to elapse before consent was given by the national officers for the formulation of individual agreements between systems and their own employes.

That being the form of settlement reached in Baltimore Friday there will be a feeling of gratification by all parties concerned that the "B. & O. family" has been allowed to work out a solution of the questions involved and in a better way than would have been otherwise possible. There has never been a day since the strike began when the employes of the Baltimore & Ohio and the officials could not have gotten together on the issues. One conference was held and the only thing to prevent a mutually satisfactory settlement being reached was the insistence of the national officers that nothing but a national agreement would be recognized. That attitude having been sensibly abandoned the employes were free to enter into negotiations with the company and with the happy result that an agreement has been signed which means the return of the strikers to their places in the shops and a resumption of activity on the entire system.

When the conditions which prevailed on other railroads during the strike, involving the destruction of property, assaults of workmen and the killing of others, are reviewed, the record of the Baltimore & Ohio strikers stands out in striking contrast. Having a due regard for the law and maintaining respect for the officials of the company, there was no resort to violence and no disorderly outbreaks anywhere on the Connellsville or Pittsburg divisions. This reflected so creditably upon the men on strike that the public was not lacking in its sympathy for them at all times. That this correct attitude paid is shown in the readiness of the company to go the limit in preserving the cordial relations which had developed from years of association and service.

Now that the strike is over, and the ending of it has been brought about in utmost fairness to both parties, it can confidently be predicted that everybody in the "B. & O. family" will join hands to recoup the losses of the strike period and realize that its task is to do everything required to advance the system to the place of importance in the transportation world that its location, extent and equipment entitle it to attain.

TIME TO GET BUSY AND KEEP BUSY.

There is everywhere recognition of the fact that the settlement of the strikes of the railway shopmen, coal miners and the textile workers removes the last obstacle to the greatest revival in business and industry the nation has ever known.

"The whole industrial machinery of the country," says Secretary of Labor Davis, "is ready for a forward movement unprecedented in our economic history. The American workman faces a period of plentiful employment. We have put back to work the millions of idle employes who were seeking jobs a year ago. We have succeeded in avoiding a drastic reduction in the high wages which obtained before the period of depression and we have kept the general wage level within a few per cent of what it was at its highest."

"The labor troubles of the last few months have caused a temporary setback in business and industry and a postponement of orders," says John A. Topping, president of the Republic Iron & Steel Company, "but deferred buying now seems likely to come forward in large volume. The business of the country is growing. Nothing can check it more than temporarily."

With stocks of merchandise, the products of manufacture and semi-finished materials of all kinds at the lowest point for years, buyers and consumers have been waiting for the removal of the strike incubus as the signal to enter the markets. Immediately buying begins the mills and factories will resume or take on renewed activity and men who have been idle or working on part time will be called to steady work. The pay rolls will swell to a prodigous amount in the aggregate. Earnings will closely approach those of war-time and will be distributed through the various channels of trade in all communities with that freedom, bordering on prodigality, for which American workmen, the best paid in the world, have been noted.

"The greatest year of expansion and prosperity that has ever been seen is ahead," says Will H. Hays, former postmaster general and now president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. "The time has come for us to lay bricks and not to browbeat. There is no laborer in America who is not better off than the cast-off royalty of Europe. To the ordinary European, every day in this country looks like Sunday."

Getting busy and keeping busy is the duty of every person if we are to benefit individually and collectively from the era of prosperity just ahead of us. Capital and labor must be willing to apply the lessons learned during the past few months of bitterness and strife and realize that both have the obligation to sustain such relations to each other that the public will not have to periodically undergo needless hardships, and as frequently be called upon to pay the cost of their obstinacy and greed.

Now that the strikes are out of the way it is time for the labor agitators to keep the tools of some useful trade in motion.

There is but one thing wrong with the signing of an agreement between the shopcrafts men of the Baltimore & Ohio and the officials. It should have taken place about 77 days ago. But then, running behind time is not unknown on this picturesque system of transportation.

The weatherman is entitled to a blue ribbon for his perfect display at the Dawson fair.

The registration shows that Democrats are almost as nearly extinct in Washington county as in Connellsville.

Why Business Men Should Be Interested In Education

BY DR. JOHN M. THOMAS
President of the Pennsylvania State College.

President Thomas has written a series of articles especially for The Courier that present a clear understanding of the possibilities of education in Pennsylvania. The first of these, entitled "Why Business Men Should Be Interested in Education," appears today and will be followed at weekly intervals by "What Education Has Done for the United States," "Is a College Education Essential to Success?" "What Pennsylvania Needs in Education" and "A Vision of the Pennsylvania State University."

The people of Pennsylvania pay about $90,000,000 a year for education. Two-thirds of this amount comes from local taxation. That is so say, more than $50,000,000 are paid out directly by the tax payers of the state each year for the education of their children and the children of their neighbors.

Per person of population the cost of education is about $10. For each child the cost is $50. I do not believe that we are spending too much. We are not paying more for the entire annual education of a child than a mother would spend in a year for banjo lessons, alone, for her child, if she wanted him to learn to play the banjo.

Thus it will probably be universally admitted that we are not spending too much for the intellectual development of our children. If there is any question as to the expenditure, it must rather be on the ground of its effectiveness. It is the duty of the business men of Pennsylvania to see to it that the boy get's a dollar's worth of education for every dollar spent.

Business men must interest themselves in education if they are to assist us school people to cure some of the defects that we know exist. For example, we have not yet been able to bring about anything like equality of opportunity between the city child and the country child. The average expense for the education of a child in the city for the entire United States is $42 a year, while for the country child the average is $23 a year. We are favoring the city child with educational advantages in the ratio of two to one.

The same discrimination against the country is to be seen in a comparison of the salaries of the city and of the country school teacher. The average salary of the city school teacher throughout the nation is $854 a year, while for the country school teacher the figure is $479.

And again the same tale is told by the number of school days in the country and city. The city child goes to school 182 days a year, while, in the country districts, the average is but 142. I recognize that a dollar in the country will do more than a dollar in the city. But these figures show so wide a divergence that they indicate, without question, that the boys and girls on the farms are not getting quite a square deal.

Business men should be interested also in the direction of school studies toward the various vocations. The principle should be that, so far as pupils are trained for vocations in the public schools, they should be trained for the callings in which the public will have the greatest need of trained workers. In the case of New York City, it may be that courses in commercial subjects should be most prominent in the high schools, while in Pennsylvania our attention should be devoted to the preparation of young men and women for activity in the fields of agriculture and industry.

As a matter of fact, however, over one-half the students in Pennsylvania high schools are taking commercial courses. I recognize the great value of commercial subjects, but that proportion is too great. Some day in this great industrial and manufacturing state, in this state which ranks seventh in agriculture, we are going to wonder what is the matter with our manufactures and our great farming industry.

This is but one phase of the problem of education, but it is interesting to see how closely the Pennsylvania State College, which is now all but in name a state university, is preparing men and women for exactly those fields which have been most cultivated in this state. Through its school of agriculture, its experiment and extension work, it is perhaps the greatest single support of scientific agriculture in the state. Through its school of engineering, it is preparing men in architecture, electricity mechanics, milling, and in civil and industrial engineering, for service in the great business activities of the state. Its school of mines is training men for one of the greatest Pennsylvania industries, while through its school of natural science the chemists and the physicists for the laboratories of the state are given their foundation. The school of liberal arts and the department of home economics prepare the teachers and the mothers of the new generation.

Selfishly as tax-payers and as business men anxious to have the best possible body of assistants available for employment, it is to our interest to see to it that children are educated in the affairs and problems of our state to the end that plants may be operated with the greatest possible intelligence and efficiency.

But from a broader and more altruistic point of view it is our duty to provide generously and wisely for education in this state. As patriots endowed with the same fine spirit that actuated the founders of the American Republic, as men with the foresight of James Madison, who said, "A popular government without popular information, or the means of acquiring it, is but a prologue to a farce or a tragedy." We owe to the children of the future some provision that the increasing complexity of life shall be attended by a constantly improving means of preparing for it.

From the days of the little red school house where the three R's were taught, we have progressed to these days when general public education has been advanced to include high schools, and when, in the great majority of states, a state university has become a part of the public school system as the only natural conclusion of our American doctrine of democracy.

If democracy means anything, it means a fair chance for all, an equal opportunity for every boy and girl. Such equal opportunity exists only when the state provides its own institutions of higher learning free to all on equal terms, just as elementary and schools are now provided. More and more a college education is becoming the normal and usual road to positions of leadership and power, and that road should be kept open for the humblest youth of the commonwealth.

If we shall not see democracy and popular government become the farce that Madison predicted for it if popular education were to be lacking, then it is our duty to provide a state university to cap the public school system of the state of Pennsylvania. Pennsylvania cannot long be content to do less for its young men and women than is done by every state in the west and south.

PROGRESS.

I am the dream of tomorrow, I am the better way.
I am the flower of the seed toilers are planting today.
I am what men haven't done but often have wondered about.
I am the problem unsolved, but young minds are working me out.

I am a field unexplored, radiant with visions and dreams;
Mountains made low for men's feet, bridges flung over the streams;
I am the chance for the boy still at his fair mother's knee.
I am the goal he may reach; I am the man he can be.

I am the road out of strife, the unbuilded castles of men.
The peace that no war shall destroy, the beauties of brush and of pen
Which canvas and paper shall know in the days that shall make up the years,
I am the joy that shall be in spite of the cynic who sneers.

Slowly but surely I rise, smoothing the way of mankind,
And always the better I build, leaving old customs behind;
I am the hope of our youth, the splendor of dawn and the sun,
I am the dream unachieved, the task which shall some day be done.

LIKE SHORT COAT

Abbreviated Jacket Has Taken Paris by Storm.

Garment Cut on Straight Lines, of Finger Tip Length, Straight and Wide Sleeves

There is a veritable craze in Paris at the present time for the short separate coat to be worn either over a matching or contrasting skirt or with any sort of dress and for almost every occasion In fact the short jacket has taken Paris by storm

These coats which are similar to suit jackets are cut on perfectly straight lines and are of finger tip length with straight and wide sleeves They may be worn with or without a belt It is noteworthy that they are replacing to a considerable extent the full length coat and the cape

There is nothing unusual in the cut of these coats but there is great novelty in the fabrics and trimmings used in their making All the Rodier stuffs and satins in quilted and blistered effects which are having such a tremendous vogue at the present time are represented

There is bullion blistered fabric which as its name implies is double Again there is a new quilted novelty Certain definite patterns have specific names such as [illegible] and [illegible] the latter is a wonderfully interesting printed embroidered and blistered silk crepe In addition to coats of these cloths there are models of cloth and heavy [illegible] which are usually embroidered in Russian or Persian design

[illegible] finger length and feature [illegible] trimmings [illegible] of lightweight [illegible] wide [illegible] around the bottoms [illegible] model carries [illegible]

In the novelty class is a jacket of India cashmere [illegible] monkey fur about the neck and sleeves and around the bottom

FAMOUS IN IRISH HISTORY

King Roderick Sometimes Referred To as the Last of the Monarchs of the Island

Rory O'Connor bears a name famous in Irish history His most noted namesake was king of Ireland When he became king of Connaught in 1156 one of his first acts was to put out the eyes of one of his brothers as a sure means of preventing him from becoming a rival In 1166 he went to Dublin gave the Danes who were in possession 4,000 cows and was there inaugurated king of all Ireland a ceremony which was the first Irish regal pageant of which the city was the scene Rulers were placed over various counties and provinces and some of these were far from popular The people of Meath deposed their king for which affront O'Connor received compensation of 240 cows

Henry II of England visited Ireland in 1171 and O'Connor's territory became disputed but after a treaty concluded at Windsor he was left to rule Connaught as before the English invasion and was to be head under Henry of the kings and chiefs of Ireland He was to acknowledge Henry as his liege lord and to pay him an annual tribute of hides Fighting with Henry and with his sons continued until Roderick's death in the abbey of Cong County Galway He is commonly spoken of as the last native king of Ireland but this distinction belongs rather to Maelsechlainn I as Roderick's title to rule the whole island was no better than that of Henry II—both resting on force alone —Detroit News

CHOOSE THEIR OWN LEADERS

Eskimo Tribe Has Made Conspicuous Success in an Effort at Self-Government.

From Point Hope 300 miles north of the Arctic circle comes a remarkable story of a self-governing Eskimo community which has been successfully carried on there for the last six years

Under the tutelage of missionaries equal suffrage has been established among the Eskimos who annually in town meeting elect from among themselves the omalik or council of leading men who in turn enact the local laws and see to their enforcement among the thousand natives who inhabit the region

Originally the omalik was composed of seven men It is recounted But it was found later that five was a better number From the beginning of the experiment the right of suffrage was given to men and women alike in the selection of the council Christmas was fixed as the day of the election because on that day all of the tribesmen come into the settlement for feasting and merrymaking The names are written on a blackboard and the five securing the greatest number of votes are declared elected while that one of the five who receives the greatest number of votes becomes the chief councilman

It was an investment Aunt Tycle But let me not forestall myself I left here on a boat, got broke Finally I reached Tampa, Florida"

"Away down there Liberty?"—from Tycle

"Patience my dear aunt Tampa and broke! After a day of hope with its throat cut from ear to ear I got on a boat bound for Havana The Spanish captain gave me passage for service He was studying English and I agreed to explain to him certain nicetles of our mother tongue you understand, and I am sure that, reaching port, he knew more about gambling terms than he could have picked up in a year of close study in one of our ordinary schools He was appreciative generous, and gave me a bonus of five dollars I went to a hotel not of the first class and it was there, that I made my investment The weather was warm and—"

"For gracious sake, Liberty, tell us!" his aunt urged him

"That is my aim, but let us not be

And Hardly Had the Northerner's Canoe Touched the Bank When From Out the Canoe Tony and Stepho Leaped Upon Him

impetuous . . . I was eating a Spanish stew out on the sidewalk, the weather being warm when along came an agent—not a man in distress but a regular agent—and I invested with him I bought a ticket in the Havana lottery Wait now Nothing ever happens until it does you know The drawing came off two days later, and my number, 376702 won the first prize twenty thousand in gold

Tycle hugged him Drace shook his hand, and the General exclaimed his astonishment

"Well that beats anything I ever heard in my life It doesn't seem possible sir"

"No, and I was somewhat taken by surprise, Uncle Howard But there is often success in a change of occupation and I had tried everything else It took me a few moments to adjust myself, then I got a draft and in Mobile received premium enough on my gold certificate to pay my debts And now it gives me great pleasure to perform that duty I owe you Uncle Howard, twelve hundred and thirty dollars all told Aunt Tycle I owe you five hundred Virgil, I owe you—but we'll get at that later Worthy and patient creditors here we are!"

He took out a roll of bank notes counted the amount of his indebtedness to his aunt and showered her lap with greenbacks Then he turned to the General

"No, Liberty I don't want the money" protested Bethpage "If you pay me, it will be the first time you ever returned borrowed money to me and I don't care to have you establish a precedent that might bring disappointment in the future

After the family bedtime Shottle came into Drace's room and requested him to report as to what progress he had made, and Drace told him all that had occurred

"And now let me tell you a notion of mine said Shottle then "If you are waiting for that old sharkbone to decay, you'll perhaps wait twenty years Attention I'm going on a little trip tomorrow In two days when I come back, I'll drive down to a convenient point you fetch the girl into the carriage you jump and away we go drive over to some place where we can catch a train and Cincinnati before old Stepho knows which way we've gone What do you say?

"But—what becomes of my oath? Oh, don't think that because I dally I have forgotten it or that in one jot I shall fail to keep it If I should, in all after life I'd have a contempt for myself"

CHAPTER XI

"Till Thursday! Drace had cried Nadine had echoed it, and another voice, hidden in the cane, had muttered the words with how different a meaning! Now Thursday was come again, and Virgil Drace infirm of purpose, again made his way down the river and through the swamp to his tryst with Nadine

But Death sought to make a third at that tryst From afar the sentineled Tony had seen Drace coming

And hardly had the Northerner's canoe touched the bank when from out the cane Tony and Stepho leaped upon him and bore him to the ground, dazed by a blow from an oar

"Ha! My fine carpetbagger! You seize my wrist and keep my knife from the old General! You steal here to make love to my daughter! Ha! Who will now keep my knife from you? In a little while now you will be deep in the marsh and the green mold will be on your bones And the old fool at the big house he die too for my men will cut his throat And then—

A piercing cry from the house and Nadine ran to them, a knife that mated Stepho's dirk clutched in her hand
